Baldness is Not Inherited OVER WEEK-END; 35 FINED One Driver Charged with Going 65 fines varied from $5 to $25. One

CIENTISTS who study the laws of inheritance have found that "acquired characteristics" are not inherited. Baldness in all cases develops many years after birth and it is therefore agreed that it is not always inherited.

Thomas case histories further show that many men who are bald have fathers and grandfathers with good heads of hair. It is also found that many men keep good heads of hair throughout life even though their fathers were bald at early ages.

Eighty-five percent of all cases of baldness can be traced to neglect or to one or more of 14 local scalp disorders. Thomas treatment is designed to overcome all of these scalp conditions—to help end dandruff, falling hair and stimulate normal hair growth. Come in today and receive the benefit of sound advice from a Thomas expert. No charge is made it tion. (Always in private.) No charge is made for consultation nor for scalp examinarom a crane on his tow-car, and began to haul the automobile to the top of the cliff. When the wrecked machine was almost at the top, the cable gave way.

Police said England was caught the whipping cable and jerked two hours later.

OLD-FASHIONED

SIMPLICITY

TELEPHONE SERVICE in this country is modern. It leads the world. Yet there is an old-fashioned simplicity about the Bell System. This applies to capital structure and financial methods as well as to the nationwide plan of decentralized operation under centralized control.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company has only one class of stock and that stock is not watered.

It has 675,000 stockholders living in every corner of the land. Their average holding is twenty-eight shares. No individual or organization owns as much as one per cent of the stock. There are no secret reserves or hidden assets.

This structure is not of recent origin, but dates back many years to the early days of the telephone. It has lived on because it is right and in the best interest of the public. It has been fundamental in making the Bell System a distinctive American business.

In the Bell System, the American Telephone Telegraph Company is the parent company, and operates the long distance lines connecting the 24 regional Bell companies. Bell Laboratories carries on the research work; Western Electric manufactures, purchases, and distributes.

Without this specialized organization back of the men and women of the Southwestern Bell, telephone service might be possible. But it could not be service as uniformly good, as quietly accurate, as far reaching, and as inexpensive as the service you know today.

CUMMINGS SAYS ATTORNEYS MUST KEEP OWN RANKS CLEAN

Tells Police Chiefs of Progress o Campaign Against "Lawyer Criminals." ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 8.-

Attorney-General Homer S. Cummings reported progress today in the Government's campaign against the type of criminal lawyer who has become a "lawyer criminal." Cummings addressed the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

"There are some members of the bar, as I am well aware, who take the position that derelictions from professional ethics should not be made a subject of public discussion," said Cummings. "As far as I am concerned, I do not for a moment believe in remaining silent when such outrageous conduct comes to notice. Because its members are supposed to be officers of the court, if not in protection of its own standing and prestige, the legal profession is under peculiar obligations to keep its own ranks as clean as the statutes and the pow ers of the various bar associations can render them."

Often More Than Incomes in Boom Years, New York Investigators Charge.

NEW YORK, July 8.-Recommendations that relief workers be paid less than the wages in private industry, that "chiselers and parasites" receiving $24,000,000 a year of relief funds be prosecuted and that "extensive carpetbagging" by out-of-town relief executives halted were made public today by counsel in the recent aldermanic relief investigation.

Lloyd Paul Stryker submitted to the Aldermen a 206-page report, reviewing the testimony and making 48 recommendations. Among them

'Allowances for individuals and families on home relief rolls should be increased so as to correspond with practical necessities. They should not be based, as at the present time, on budgets which are the result of theoretical research." The average weekly allowance to a single person to meet every need was orted as $7.30 a week, and $19.50 was given as the average for a family of nine. The number of persons on relief was reported as

No Relief for Allens..

"No persons should henceforth be added to the relief rolls unless they have been bona fide residents and citizens of New York for a time prior to the depression. "Aliens should not be permitted to work on relief."

"Every needy unemployed person to whom work is offered either in the relief program or by a private employer, who arbitrarily refuses to accept such employment should have his or her name stricken from the relief rolls."

"Persons should be encouraged to accept temporary private employ-ment and reinstatement to relief rolls should be simplified."

"All relief personnel having to do with the handling of materials and supplies should be finger-printed."

Tempting the Amateur.

Ar every turn the poor ama-teur champion is tempted. Promoters, desiring to capitalize the ready-made advertising which goes with all standout amateur successes, dangle a big financial bait before the goggle-eyes of the titlist, who in all probability needs the money much more than he needs his amateur standing.

A Los Angeles promoter has bid $25,000 for a return match between the two Helens of California, Mrs. Moody and Miss Jacobs. That means $12,500 cash in hand for each. It is a temptexcused for listening to the rustle of greenbacks.

However, players owe something to the amateur organization under the auspices and financing of which they came up from obscure beginnings, and rose to fame. To capitalize professionally for their own benefit what was made possible only by

You have to be lucky to win at the old game of baseball and sometimes it is better to be lucky than good. #### A FAIR PROPOSAL.

The second deficiency appropriation bill, now on its way through Congress, contains a provision which entitles its sponsor, Representative Cochran of St. Louis, to the gratitude not only of the voters in his district but of Federal taxpayers generally. This is the section of the bill which provides that in all cases now pending or hereafter filed in the Federal Court of Claims by an Indian tribe or band, the Court of Claims must offset against any amount found due the Indians, sums previously expended gratuitously by the United States in behalf of the petitioning tribe or band.

The importance and justice of the Cochran proposal was brought out clearly by the testimony of Assistant Attorney-General Blair at the hearings on the bill. According to Mr. Blair, there are now 98 cases of this sort pending in the Court of Claims, the grand total of the sums sought being in excess of three billion dollars. #### ETHIOPIA THEN AND NOW.

One of the reasons Italy gives for her determination to conquer Ethiopia is the existence of slavery in that country. Great outpourings of indignation and of sympathy for the oppressed have come from Italian spokesmen. In Mussolini's words: "We consider our mission in Ethiopia is sincerely and definitely to abolish slavery and promote the work of civilization." Alessandro Lessona, Undersecretary of Colonies, has this to say: "The Ethiopian Empire represents nothing but the most humiliating subjection of a few African people to another African people, a vast colony maintained by a barbarous system of slavery and serfdom."

The Manchester Guardian has done an informative bit of digging into back files to obtain an earlier Italian view of Ethiopia. Count Bonoin-Longare spoke for Italy in welcoming Ethiopia into the League of Nations in 1923, it finds, and praised the newcomer as "a distant nation which, by the admirable consistency with which it has preserved its religious faith and national character, has gained the title of nobility to which we must render here the justice that is due." The Count also mentioned slavery, but as largely a thing of the past:

As for what concerns the condition of the slaves, the progressive improvement in custom has brought about an amelioration of their lot to the point where one can no longer speak of slavery but of servitude.

If one accepts these Italian views at their face value, then conditions in Ethiopia have retrograded from virtual liberty to horrible servitude in the last 12 years. By all unbiased accounts, however, the contrary is true. Slavery continues, but has been greatly reduced in the last dozen years.

The exhibit is another instance of how official statements, whether fulsome praise or fiery denunciation, may be based on no facts whatever, but merely designed to serve the needs of the moment.

What Happened Under the Codes?

Viewing results of NRA, writers find gains in employment, payrolls and shorter hours, mainly in plants of lowest standards; trade practice enforcement by private agencies proved unsound; cost of living rose faster than wages; if end of the codes means loss of benefits, then a demand for public control is predicted.

M. D. Vincent, Head of NRA Textile Division, and Beulah Amidon in Survey Graphic.

HE Supreme Court decision in the Schechter case has brought to an abrupt end our first experiment in exercising a measure of public control over the industrial life of the country. The 10 months ahead. with a "stop-gap" NRA, will be a time to assay the work of the past two years and also to observe, with competition free except for the anti-trust laws, what standards of wages, hours and fair trade practices industry sets for itself. is obviously impossible at this date to make any final summary of the brief NRA experience. Further, the Brookings Institution study has already demonstrated that evaluation of NRA as a recovery instrument depends wholly on the definition of 'recovery" with which one starts. This article will not attempt to prove that NRA some answers, although frankly incomplete to the question, What happened under the

One of the most widely accepted code provisions was the one prohibiting child labor Though newsboys were not covered, nearly 125,000 children under 16 were taken out of the labor market, their jobs in factories, mines, shops, offices made available to ur employed adults. Unfortunately, few develpoments under the codes were so direct, so definite, and so unanimously approved.

Code regulation of hours and wages had a three-fold purpose: to increase employment by reducing the work-day or the workweek; to protect living standards; to build up domestic markets for farm products and manufactured goods. Two studies of the same plants, the first made in February, 1934, the second in F '> ruary, 1935, showed an 11 per cent increase in employment, a rise in payrolls from $7. 600,000 to $10,200,000; an increase in average hourly earnings from 36.6 cents to 42.3 cents ($11.78 weekly to $13.07 weekly); a drop an average man-hours per week from

In a statistical report on the first 18 months of NRA, the Research and Planning Division found that in coded industries wage rates had increased 30 per cent, in non-code industries, 10 per cent, adding, "This should not be taken to mean that the effect of the codes is 20 per cent." The biggest increases were found in industries where rates were lowest. In industries where rates were already high, the rise was small. The cut in hours was also most striking in the lowpaid groups.

A number of factors operated to keep the workers from getting the full benefit even of such low wage minima as were set by the codes. In some instances, the minimum wage tended to become the maximum. More frequently, wage increases in classifications ous types of speed-ups and stretch-out

NRA established the Compliance Division to enforce labor and trade practice provisions. Trade-practice committees were composed entirely of industry members. Labor complaints committees were composed of industry and labor members in equal numbers, and some of them were very effective. particularly where employer and labor organizations co-operated voluntarily. Nevertheless, such examples are relatively few. From the Manchester Guardian.

T HE "Stimson Doctrine" is that by which the United States, on Jan. 7, 1982, an-nounced that it did not "intend to recognize any situation, treaty or agreement . brought about by means contrary to the covenants and obligations of the Pact of Paris." That was aimed against Japan which was then in the act of taking Manchuria from China by force.

Story of a Doctrine

On Jan. 16, 1932, the League of Nations said much the same, but based its action the Covenant of the League. On March 11, the Assembly unanimously founded a similar declaration on the pact and the Covenant. Both these statements were directed against Japan.

On Aug. 3, 1932, 19 American states informed Bolivia and Paraguay that they would recognize no territory acquisitions On Oct. 10, 1933, six Latin-American states

-Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Mexico, Paraguay and Uruguay-made a formal treaty declaring that as between themselves they would recognize no territorial arrangement or acquisition that was brought about by force of arms. In the following March, Italy adhered to a treaty. A few weeks later, many other American Powers, including the United States, did the same.

Thus the doctrine has advanced to the status of a treaty, accepted by 20 countries, and is well on its way to become a rule of international law. This development is traced in Pacific Affairs with great clarity by Kisaburo Yokota, who naturally concludes his inquiry by discussing where Japan stands in relation to the doctrine.

Mr. Yokota is discovered to be not less ingenious than his countrymen. He says that Japan has never disputed the doctrine, that she is entirely in agreement with it, but that it has no relevance to her action in Manchoukuo because she has never vio lated the principles which the doctrine seeks to defend. Therefore, Mr. Yokota urges that the Pacific states should themselves conclude a treaty "of which the underlying principle would be the Stimson Doctrine, thus strengthening immensely the peace ma chinery in the Pacific."

But since all other Powers hold that Japan violated her treaties, what then? Mr. Yokota replies that the doctrine of "non-rec ognition" should hold only until the disputants (in this case Japan and China) have reached a settlement "by some pacific means." Thus, Japan did nothing wrong. Thus, Japan did nothing wrong. but, if she did, let China be forced to accept it, and who will have anything grumble about?

How the Japanese must enjoy making faces at the West!

which labor organizations and NRA offices are receiving from all sections of the country. If the release of business and industry by the Supreme Court decision from Government control is but an open door of return to those practices which contributed to the demoralization of domestic markets and values, it cannot be expected that the victims will patiently submit to a continuing Gov ernment policy of hands-off.

The public has felt for a brief time the effect of public control, even though in a most limited sense. It now knows that el fective action under Government leadership is possible. It believes that Government has the inherent power to safeguard both pub lic and private security. The uncertain and bewilderment created by the Supreme Court's decision is very likely to be dispelled public regulations of those economic forces by an unyielding demand for permanent and agencies which private management i unable to organize and control tranquil, lulling day last May that the chair arrived at Wits' End. As though it were yesterday, I remember my first glimpse of its noble profile, when I came in and found it glistening amid the shabbier furnishings. I had been up-the street on some errand or other -had probably trudged off, let us say, to take an ailing neighbor a glass of guava jelly nesting in a basket under a snowy napkin. At all events, the chair arrived during my absence. That notorious dawdler, my man Saturday, explained that two melodramatic de-livery men had borne it triumphantly into the living room, cut the strings, whipped off and taken away the encasing paper, and gone their way, saying no words as to whence it had come, and leaving not a tittle of evidence behind to help me guess. It was a new chair,

Being a burnt child, my first suspicion led me to telephone one of those harpies called interior decorators. I know their tricks and their manners, and I just wanted to warn this one that I would not have my flat fixed by duress, that if she thought to tempt me with the sight of this masterpiece on the staggering bill for it, she might better send a dray around for it at once. The harpy in question re-pelled this "horrid implication" with some little asperity.

The chair, though superb in arch

Ruby Mercer Reverses Usual Story As She Plays in Forest Park

By Marguerite Martyn

UP from grand opera came Ruby Mercer to be a prima donna of our Municipal Opera Company. It is rather a reversal of where the star rises by slow and painful degrees or through a stroke of fortune from the ranks of the chorus. But making her light opera debut here as Nadina in "The Chocolate Soldier" was just as thrilling and stimulating an experience to this grand opera star as ever came to a novice from the ranks.

For one who during the few years of her young operatic career has be come accustomed to take the lead and dominate presentation: of such The Mystery of classics as "Romeo and Juliet," the Easy Chair. "Faust," "Rigoletto," "Tales From the Easy Chair.

It was on a Hoffman," "Barber of Seville." and a dozen other prima donna roles in Montreal and Cincinnati audiences. the vocal requirements of "The Chocolate Soldier" were just no trick at all. As the week progressed and Nadina burgeoned and bloomed with ever increasing effulgence, critics, some of the mos: cautious, experienced and blase among them, were saying "Ruby Mercer's greatest, perhaps the first lyric soprano voice of real grand opera coloratura proportions ever heard on the Muny Opera stage."

Rather belittling her vocal triumph but apparently alert for praise of her dramatic performance, the prima donna, fresh-or rather a little wilted from an allday rehearsal of her this week's part in "The Vagabond King," asked eagerly, "How was I as Nato my delight."

Marriageable!

Their Badness The young modern hopes to make a fair give-and-take bargain in her marriage today, and not necessarily to cap ture the season's greatest prize, says this writer

> HAT," inquire anxious mothers, "are the chances today of by MRS. JOHN S. REILLY Mother of Seven and Author of "Commonsense for Mothers"

our girls getting married?" A profound question, that, and one which quite naturally concerns, if it doesn't ac-tually trouble, every mother who has daughters, especially if they're at or approaching that undetermined period known as the marriageable age. You may say: "But surely modern mothers have a different point of view about narriage for their daughters. Surely in this day and generation, marriage isn't the endall of existence for girls, and surely it doesn't loom so large in their mothers' plans as it once did. There are so many other careers open to girls today, so many other satisfactory ways of spending their lives. Marriage is only one opening for a girl."

It isn't after all, so very long ago since marriage did indeed "loom large" in moththe mothers of the generation when I was very young. Their efforts to capture the prizes in the marriage market were sometimes so strenuous and so obvious as to be definitely embarrassing to their daughters. The technique of marrying off the girls was fairly elaborate. Some mothers were far more subtle and clever at it than others; but they all engaged in the pursuit of eligible husbands for their girls, with of course varying degrees of success.

A mother who married off her daughters "well," that is to men who were well able to take care of them financially, was considered a good matchmaker and a fine little woman. The world nodded complacent approval, recognized that she had performed the job assigned to her very satisfactorily, and paid her unhesitating and open tribute.

The part played by the daughter in all this, as you may remember, was fairly negligible. The high pressure individualism which besets girls today, and which makes them regard independence of choice as the supreme asset in acquiring a husband, had not then set in—or at least had not shown itself or made itself felt. Girls did play their part in their conquests then to be sure. They were expected to be charming, to be amiable, to be amenable to their mothers' designs for them. Very few had the temerity or the independence to resist the family plans. They fell generally, with as good grace as possible, into the pattern of their existence, and were doubtless grateful for their blessings when a husband of sorts was one of them.

Today, of course, much of all that is changed. One profound change is the very independence which I have mentioned, meaning of course, independence of marriage and independence of the support of one's family-husband or father. This independence in women has brought of attitudes to ward marriage, ranging all the way from the young lady who scorns it entirely, to young lady who will enter upo but if she be allowed to keep her jobher other job that is.

HERE is, oddly enough though, another rather profound change which marriage market. That is the established modern procedure of starting girls forth launching them on their social careers so to speak, at a very early age-much earlier than we or our mothers ever dreamed of going forth, Do you remember how sheltered girls were-how chaperoned-how restricted and hidden? All those years of preparation, mostly spent in acquiring a series of ladylike accomplishments which might and did dazzle and overwhelm the gentlemen when finally in a burst of glory we appeared upon their scene-remember? French, plano, singing, dancing, how to walk or to stand, how to converse (not to talk), how to arrange All the polite and largely futile usages girl until she emerged the American Beauty herself, to take the world by storm and surely to capture one of the richest and most eligible bachelors or titled foreigners of the season, for her husband. I remember reading years ago an article of a formal civilization were added to a called "The Making of an American Beauty." It described in detail the processes, painful, pleasant, or preposterous, but all long drawn out, which a girl went through in order to come out one of those fulsome and dazzling blooms. In those days all things pointed to the debut. It was the public announcement that the rose was ripe and ready to be plucked. And before that time, daughter was kept under cultivation in conditions of the strictest seclusion, and only allowed to blush unseen lest her fre any possible chance marred before she made her great entrance.

Today as all of us with daughters have reason to know, we face a very different situation. The independence of our sex has extended itself far down into the ranks and girls of 13, 12, and even 11 are showing strong and sturdy symptoms of having minds of their own and the will to use them. Chiefly this independence of thought and action manifests itself in the desire to go to parties-evening parties, dances, movies, and so on-at what seems to us, with our notions out of the past, a very tender age. Many of us resist these ideas of our daughters to the utmost; but it is proof of the victory of the younger generation that it is a generally accepted thing today for girls at 16 years old to go here there and everywhere alone with one or more boys. Such a situation would have caused heart attacks and apopletic strokes in the older generation of our day.

I have come to the conclusion that the truly important part of this trend to grow up and to do things immaturely, itself is not so serious. I have often felt that it may even be a direct effect of changes, in climate and in economic conditions, which we certainly cannot stop and of which we may not even be directly aware.

is where it leads a girl. The trend in

B UT where does it lead our children, their point upon the dance floor— this more or less complete emancipation from the family roof at 16? Does it lead them into early marriages—the logical result of early "stepping-out"? That's what primarily concerns us mothers. Yes it is; in spite of surface or underground changes in our girls, we mothers are still the same in essentials as were our mothers and grandmothers. Marriage is still

Perhaps the technique of the marriage market is different, perhaps the marriage market itself has been abolished, but the urge to see our children happily married is still uppermost in the motherly mind. Business careers, social service, brilliant success in the professions are only secondary accomplishments in our eyes, compared with the solid and satisfactory

When our daughters don't marry we're resigned within ourselves to other things they choose to do; but no matter how stoutly we boast about their achievements, we're not in our souls really thrilled. It is fundamentally much more fun to be a grandmother to a flesh and blood baby than to an infant career whether we admit it or not.

Well then! We are all intensely interested in knowing whether or not the early public appearances of the modern daughter lead her into marriage at a younger age. It would certainly remove some of the motherly objection to dances at 14 and moonlight rides at 16, if we could be assured that by beginning at * 14 our daughters would be finished—that is married and permanently settled — by 18! But does it follow? Alas! I very much fear that it does ential factors, such a depres husbands of jobs and prospects have stepped in. Youthful marriages are more the exception than the rule. I have talked on this subject to a number of mothers with debutante daughters and some of them have expressed themselves as approving young marriages—liking the idea of two young people "growing up together" as they call it. Others have said they wouldn't mind their daughter's marrying early, if the man she marries were from eight to 10 years older than she. On the other hand many mothers have assured me that they would consider marriage the year their daughters come out one of the worst disasters which could befall them.

As for financial "prizes" in the marriage market today, these are so few and far between and so keenly fought for that the iron must enter into the soul of a girl before she can get one.

Happily, though, with the other sweeping changes (why are changes always sweeping?) has come one other change in attitude which promises a little better for the modern girl's chances of ually not, if she's sensible, looking for a prize in the marriage market—she is much more likely to be well content with something quite different from that.

She shows, in fact, a dis-tinct inclination in the direction of the "Thank Heaven for a good man's love" school of thought and action. If after a year or two out in the world she wants to be married and most girls do in their hearts, she knows that she must not place her requirements too high or there will be none to meet her. She will try rather to make a good bargain and she will know that a bargain is usually the result of the meeting of two minds—of compromise on both sides. Today's marriageable girl understands that the success of her marriage is at least as much in her hands as in her husband's-that she must be prepared to make concessions, even sacrifices and to do it amiably and persistently. And today's daughter has, unquestionably, with in herself the means and the equipment to make her marriage a happy and enduring one, because she doesn't expect too much of it, and because she's willing to take the bad with the good, the bumps with the jam. Perhaps growing up young has con-tributed to the common sense she shows. I am not quite prepared to have a final opinion as to that. In any case, let mothers be keenly alive to the uncermarriagable age let's take them as much as possible to the places where the marriage market is most active-the cities where men of all types, ages and income congregate.

There's just one danger here. Watch out that your daughter doesn't pass her market and miss her chance to be married. Don't let her become too choosy, too particular. Opportunities for marriage are like all other opportunities. They must be recognized and grasped or

And try to give your daughters clear heads, clear eyes and that poised and balanced judgment that straight sense of true values. that readiness to meet and be sporting about hard conditions as well as easy ones, which seem these days to offer about the only secure guarantee for a happy successful marriage.

Perhaps it has always been like that; most certainly it is like that today.

A Remedy for Childish Habit Of Borrowing

Youngsters Can Be Taught to Do Without Things They Want.

By Angelo Patri

"Why, good evening, Ralph.
Won't you come in? Alfred isn't in just now, but"

"No, thank you. I came to tell you, Mrs. Cooley, that Al borrowed quarter from me last month and can't get it back from him."

When Alfred arrived home his mother at once asked him what he meant by borrowing money and not returning it. He had an allowance and that ought to be enough. "Why did you borrow money?"
"I had spent mine. You wouldn't You've gotten into the habit of calling things by pretty names, no matter how ugly they really are. There's just one name for this business—stealing. And you're going to stop it. This is the last cent I pay for you. If you borrow again, you for you. If you borrow again, you pay. The quarter I gave Ralph is coming out of this week's allowance. If you owe any more, my advice to you is to get busy and earn the money to pay it."

A woman has far more in-volved if she accepts the advances of a man. It may affect her whole life by leading to marriage. She is therefore much more cautious and has to be wooed, whereas with the man it is much more likely to be a transient for Shirts!

Yes, Madame, it is possible and by means of a very thorough, very convincing process—Calgonizing! Let us explain. After months of constant washing there is formed about the inner fibers of any cloth an invisible film of lime soap residue, a stubborn, pore-clogging glaze which defies solution in plain water or any home-laundering process. This glaze prevents proper passage of air through the cloth. In the case of a shirt of any kind the latter becomes sticky, stifling, uncomfortable. Fifty per cent of summer heat discomfort comes from inner heat rather than outer heat. The average shirt is hot because it isn't clean!

Very well, you send the shirt to White Line Laundry. One dip in our Calgonized solution loosens most of this soapy residue. A second rinse completely dissolves it, leaving the cloth fibers cleaner, softer, cooler than ever before-air-cooled! Why not give us a chance to prove this fact-today?

Conciliation Commission Quits Work After Angry Scene and Its Members Go Home-Hearings Off Indefinitely.

SCHEVENINGEN, The Nether-th ands, July 9.—The conciliation ba mission seeking to avert war between Italy and Ethiopia decided Ann today to suspend its hearings indefinitely.

The members arranged to depart immediately, having already communicated their opinions to the BR agents of the governments they represented.

The two Italian delegates were reported to have refused to hear a witness for Ethiopia after a meeting, held late yesterday in an at-tempt to reconcile differences among the members, broke up in

An angry scene was reported to have developed when Prof. Gaston gre Jeze, legal adviser to the Ethiopian lat Government, said that Ualual, scene of the first major frontier incident, was in Ethiopian territory.

The Italian representatives entered a strong protest against such testimony, asserting that the commission was empowered to consider only the causes of incidents. They insisted they would hear no more evidence from Prof. Jeze. When the Ethiopian adviser persisted in giving his views, the session ended.

The Italian-Ethiopian Concilia-on Commission, under the instruc-ons of the League of Nations Den Council, held preliminary meetings Lin at Milan, Italy, in June and reconvened in this suburb of The Hague

Dr. Potter, a professor of international organization at the Geneva Institute of International Studies, has been acting as legal adviser to the Ethiopian delegation to the League of Nations.

The other Ethiopian member is Prof. Albert de la Pradelle of Paris.
From the start, the Italian deleweigh gates insisted that delimitation of it frontiers should not be discussed, feet although the Ethiopian delegates to the tried to expand the discussions to

The commission, named after Premier Mussolini consented to submit the dispute to conciliation machinery, was instructed to report ck to the League of Nations council before Aug. 25.

It said Avenol called on Sir Samuel and Capt, Eden and "discussed various questions which will be dealt with by the Council and As-sembly of the League of Nations in the near future."

Since the next regular session of the League is scheduled for Sep-tember, "near future" was then to mean an extraordinary meeting was likely.
